

WATERS, KRAUS & PAUL

UNCOMMON HELP FOR UNCOMMON CASES

Whether providing clients with skilled representation, an assertive presence in the courtroom or impressive resolutions in trials and settlements, Waters, Kraus & Paul is at the top of its class. Partners Gary Paul, Mike Armitage and John Janofsky bring their passion for justice to every case, for every client, every time.

The Los Angeles-based firm specializes in representing whistleblowers and qui tam clients, children with birth injuries caused by exposures to toxins, and people suffering from mesothelioma (asbestos-related cancer) or injuries from dangerous medical devices including metal-on-metal hip replacements and surgical mesh.

Waters, Kraus & Paul's successful representation of California whistleblower Michael Wilson against Bristol-Myers Squibb resulted in a share of a $515 million federal settlement in 2008. Thanks to the firm's efforts, the California Insurance Commission intervened in 2012 for the first time ever in a whistleblower lawsuit against a pharmaceutical company.

The firm is pleased to note that three of its partners have been selected to the Super Lawyers list. In addition, Gary Paul was honored to serve this past year as president of the American Association for Justice, a national association of plaintiffs' attorneys.
